FOREWORD

This publication presents the diverse scholarly and creative achievements of the AUP faculty in 2019. The range and high quality of faculty work grow year after year and contribute to the university's strong reputation for innovative and influential scholarship.

One highlight of 2019 was the Paris Centennial Conference, the first of a pair of conferences co-organized by AUP's Center for Critical Democracy Studies and the Belfer Center at Harvard Kennedy School. This conference brought together well-established and emerging scholars in the field of First World War studies with diplomats and public policy experts to explore and reflect upon the continued importance of the Treaty of Versailles on modern international relations.

Collectively, the diverse body of scholarly and creative work highlighted in this brochure reflects the breadth and depth of the faculty's engagements with both the classroom and with many of the world's most pressing issues. Numerous AUP professors are committed to scholarly and creative work that furthers their teaching mission and supports the university's mission beyond the classroom. Though much of this scholarly work, faculty is socially engaged and immersed in important local and global issues. Faculty and student collaborations stand out as excellent examples of the AUP learning environment that is inquisitive, interdisciplinary and rigorous. Through this work, the AUP faculty contribute to the university mission to educate our Global Explorers to communicate effectively; to develop creative interdisciplinary solutions to contemporary global challenges; and to move across cultural and intellectual borders with a sense of commitment and responsibility.

In recent years, AUP has emerged as a leader in the American international university community, a visible and increasingly respected institution in France, and as an innovative laboratory for American–style international education.
